TRADITION OF THE NEZ PERCES

The Red Man's Darwinism.

[From the Idaho Signal, 1872.]

The Nez Perces Indians hold to the doctrine that all the various tribes of In-dians sprung from the lower order of cre-tion. The peculiar process of de-velopment, or metamorphosis, by which they have attained to their present state, they are cunning enough not to disclose or attempt to philosophize upon—passing over a long period of transition and becoming fulfiledzed sons of the forest in a moment of time.

THEIR TRADITION.

Thousands of years ago, there existed an animal of immense size, way off to the southwest of the country now occu-pied by the Nez Perces. It was the largest of all the animal creation, and was known as the Ills-wau-tsih. was known as the Ins-wan-isin. This animals greatest propensity was the devouring of every living thing he came across. His voraciousness was so great that lizards and reptiles of all kinds and sizes, bears, wolves, and animals of all descriptions, at one guip, would disappear in the depths of his capacious maw. At the same existed the coyote, or "little wolf," noted for his cunning, and recognized as chief among and by the other animals, they looked upon him as at some future time to work out for them a Little Wolf had heard of the tremendous slaughter the "Ill-wau-tsib," was making among the other animals, and determined to put a stop to it. To this end he girded on his armor, which consisted of two ropes made of wild hemp, a quiver made of bear-skin, some tinder, and knives of flint, all of which he concealed under his fore-leg, and, being fully equipped, he started out on his perilons mission. After traveling many days, and over a great stretch of country. Little Wolf de-scried the "Ills-wau-tish" in the dis-tance, and immediately prepared for the conflict. Taking the two ropes which were miles in length, he fastened them to a cord of sinew, which was about his body, and the other ends of the rope be had fastened, by his single aid he had along with him, to two trees a long distance from each other.

By this time the "Ills-wau-tsih" was within hearing of Little Wolf. Little howls out, "Come on old 'Ills-wau-tish' and prepare to die, for I am going to and prepare to die, for I am going to slay you!" and he came, and the battle raged with considerable violence, for some time. Little Wolf getting in some very good strokes now and then; but was finally compelled to abandon an active, offensive fight, and resorted to cunning and operating on the defensive. The old fellow had, however swallowed Little Wolf, having him part way down, when the ropes and sinew girth prewhen the ropes and sinew girth pre-vented his going down entirely. The old fellow stamped about and howled fearfully, and declared, "I will swallow Little Wolf." Taking a long breath, he made a huge effort—the girth was broken and down went poor Little Wolf. After resting a short time, he made a tour of the balls of the old fellow and found all ing it with ignited tinder, devours it, and then counsels obedience among the other inhabitants, and promises a speedy deliverance from their prison. He then cooks a meal for his fellow prisoners and takes a piece of fat from the heart of the beast and rubs the wounds and sores of his fellows, which heals them.

He then says to them, "You are my subjects, and it is now time to get out of In taking the fat from around the heart, I have struck the old fellow a death blow." Proceeding with his work, he caused the old fellow to how tremendously. He writhed and kicked and tried to throw up his "supper," and they came from his nose, ears and mouth, all fied out but Little Wolf. The old fellow tried to rid himself of him, but Little Wolf did not propose to leave until his mission was accomplished. The old fellow declared he would eject him, but failing in the attempt, rolled over and 'and gave up the ghost." Little Wolf after the old fellow died, walked out and collected his companions to help to skin the beast and cut him in pieces. They took the meat from the bones and had a right hearty meal.

Little Wolf became transformed into a Nez Perces chief, and a tribe sprang up around him.

Little Wolf had come from beyond the mountains and fought this great fight, and effected this wonderful deliverance, on the grounds between the south fork of Clearwater river and Chamas prairie.

The Nez Perces being somewhat dim-inutive in size is accounted for by reason of their coming from leavings created out of the fag ends of the beast; but what they lack in stature they claim they more than make up in intelligence and cunning, taking after their illustri-ous progenitor, Little Wolf. Thus ends the tradition.

I have given it to you as it was given to the by "Ta-wish-wai" (Joseph) and "Hol-lo-ho-sote" (Lawyer), the head chief and ex-head chief of the Nez Perces, through P. B. Whitman, interpreter and in reply to a question from me, put to them as tollows: From whence origin ated the Nez Perces Indians? F. W. MONTEITH.

FROM THE BLACK HILLS.

DEADWOOD CITY, June 18th.—The rush to the "Hills" this Spring has been and is still simply frightful. There must necessarily be a great deal of destitution, as the mines are very limited, there having been no new discoveries this Spring, notwithstanding the vast amount of prospecting done in every direction, and the impression forces itself upon my mind that there is nothitself upon my mind that there is nothing in the Hills outside this little district of Deadwood.

We have already ten times too many people here for the small area of paying territory It is estimated that there are over tifty thousand here now, and I do not think the estimate too large. The result is a large town. Desdwood City is begining to assume the appear-ance of a city of magnitude. We have two large bank buildings that look quite "cityfied," as well as quite a number of fine stores, residences, churches, schoolhouses, etc., which would do credit to some more pretentious towns. We have two theatres (not first-class, however.) in full blast all the time, with their "matinee" every afternoon. There are hundreds of families here, and "pull backs" are seen on the street in pro-tusion. In short, there are many evi-dences of civilization, making a wonderful change within the last six months. The fact is the place is outgrowing itself and there is bound to be a reaction Business has been unusually good; it has been almost impossible to get sup-plies in fast enough for the demand. Everything has been very high, and there is bound to be a great amount of suffering here next Winter.

A FLOW OF FISH FROM AN ARTES-

At a recent meeting of the California Academy of Sciences, at San Francisco, Thomas R. Bard, of Hueneme, Ventura county, donsted specimens of fish, supposed to be trout, thrown up from an ar posed to be trout, thrown up from an ar-tesian well 141 feet deep, bored in the sand-hills near that place. The well, which is nearly 300 feet from high-water mark, was bored in 1871, and every year since has thrown cut immense quanti-ties of fresh spawned fish in April and fearfully, and declared, "I will swallow Little Wolf." Taking a long breath, he made a huge effort—the girth was broken and down went poor Little Wolf. After resting a short time, he made a tour of the belly of the old fellow, and found all kinds of animals and reptiles therein, which had been carrying on a kind of internal war among themselves. Feeling somewhat hungry, Little Wolf takes one of his knives and cuts a piece of fat from the heart of the beast, and warming it with ignited tinder devours it. accompanying the donation, says that in a bucketful, one-fourth of the weight of the contents was fish. It is proved that these fish have appeared every year, as it was only recently that much attention was paid to the phenomens. These fish are of various sizes, the largest about an inch in length. The nearest stream where fish are found is Santa Pauls Creek, twenty-five miles from the well, but it empties into the Santa Clara River, distant seven miles, at a point twenty miles distant. Fish cannot live in that stream on account of the ever shifting sands in its channel. This may appear to the reader as a gigantic fish story, but Prof. Davidson, a member of the society, says something similar was ob-served in Santa Clara county, near San Jose, when redwood sawdust was thrown from the artesian well, many miles dist-ant from the mill in the mountains on the west side of the peninsula. They then divided the skin between each other. The bones were taken and scattered to the uttermost parts of the earth, and an allotment of land was made

They then divided the skin between each other. The bones were taken and scattered to the uttermost parts of the earth, and an allotment of land was made to each of the delivered ones, which they were to take as their country and they would all be changed in the twinking of an eye and they would find that a race of people would spring up from the bones of the beast, in all respects like unto them. "But," said the fox, "you have reserved nothing for yourself." Little Wolf called for water. His paws were yet dripping with the blood of the beast. He dipped his paws in the water and scattered the blood and water all over this country occupied by the

A SENSATIONAL DIVORCE.

Sr. Louis, June 16 .- A divorce case of a strangely sensational nature was decided in one of our circuit courts this week, but the court and the lawyers conweek, but the court and the lawyers conspired so successfully to make it a tame affair that it received scarcely a passing notice in our city papers. The plaintiff was John Baptiste Charles Lucas, the wealthiest young man in St. Louis, and a member of one of our best families. The defendant, his wife, was formerly a Miss Mary Commiss Morton, a Kentucky belle of great beauty, and for some time a brilliant star in the social circles of Louisville. About two years since Lucas met her by accident in the usual way, and conceived such an admiration for her that he at once made siege upon her heart. In time the citastege upon her heart. In time the cita-del was taken. A fashionable marriage tock place in Louisville at the house of the bride. The happy husband returned to St. Louis with his beautiful wife, and with her he was the toast of the town for several weeks. In three months love's young dream had faded, however so far as the husband was concerned, for he discovered that his Blue Grass beauty would become a mother b-fore that period which young married people look forward to as the shortest possible time within which they can achieve legitimate posterity. A big row ensued. The husband swore and tore up things generally. The wife vowed it was all regular. Doctors and motherswas all regular. Doctors and inclusive in-law were called in, and they pro-nounced the suspected wife's condition very suspicious. The husband left his splendid home, his wife remained, and within five months after the marriage gave berth to a bouncing boy. A divorce suit followed, and last Tuesday Judge Gottschalk set a special hour in the afternoon to hear the case. Nobody was present except the court officers and law-yers for plaintiff and defendant; the case yers for plaintiff and defendant; the case was called, the evidence given in scarcely andible tones, and an absolute decree of divorce granted. The evidence consisted of the marriage certificate and the the testimony of Dr. Hodgen that the child was delivered by him, and that it was a healthy nine months' infant; that it could not have been even a seven months' product. The wife was represented by attorneys, but they filed no sented by attorneys, but they filed no answer. They first proposed to fight the suit by proving like adultry on the part of the husband, but he agreed to part of the husband, but he agreed to donate her $30,000 and endow her with a life annuity of $1,800, and they agreed to let him get the divorce by default. The wife is with her relatives in Kentucky. She still swears that it was all regular, but it is stated that the paternal author is well known in Louisville. The secret manner in which the divorce The secret manner in which the divorce proceedings were conducted has given rise to much unfavorable comment here. and especially in view of the fact that an attorney named Beall had been so re-

The heirs of Stone contested Cook's administration in the Probate Court, and employed Bob Peirrepont to manage the case. — was Judge, and the fight went on before him for a week. A great many witnesses were examined, and a great deal of bard arguing and swearing was done. Finally the case was given to the Court for decision. Judge — sat down and ruminated for some time, and then delivered himself—"Martin" (meaning Cook), "you have explained the law in this case, and your witnesses have sworn pint blank on your side, and according to your version you should have the property. And Robert, (meaning Pierrepont), you have explained the law on your side just as well as Martin explained it on his, and your witnesses have stood by you just as well as Martin's witnesses stood by him. It's even as can be. Now what am I to do? I can't decide against either of you.
